As she has piloted the Class of '71 through four

She shares in the experience of learning.

She is Youth—the ideas that she expresses, the experiences that she has, and the memories that she leaves behind are youthful ones. For she is not apart from her students, but rather she has grown and learned along with them. Her vivacity for life encourages her students to overlook the doubts and fears that come with adulthood. She quietly teaches us to accept our responsibilities as adults and to stand unshaken through the most harrowing situations. And who can forget how she unselfishly shares in our triumphs—our defeats? Whether it is the first class of the year or the night of graduation she stands aside, unheralded and unsung, and sometimes completely forgotten. But she is not forgotten, for we as students affectionately and gratefully identify with her. Non-conformist educator; concerned critic of life; she walks through the halls of KHS with an aire of comfortable certainty and confidence, accepting her hard-earned professional status as something that is natural. Her knowledge of aviation has helped her pilot the Class of '71 through four memorable years of high school. It is with this same vibrancy of life that exists within you that we dedicate the 1971 Jester to. . .

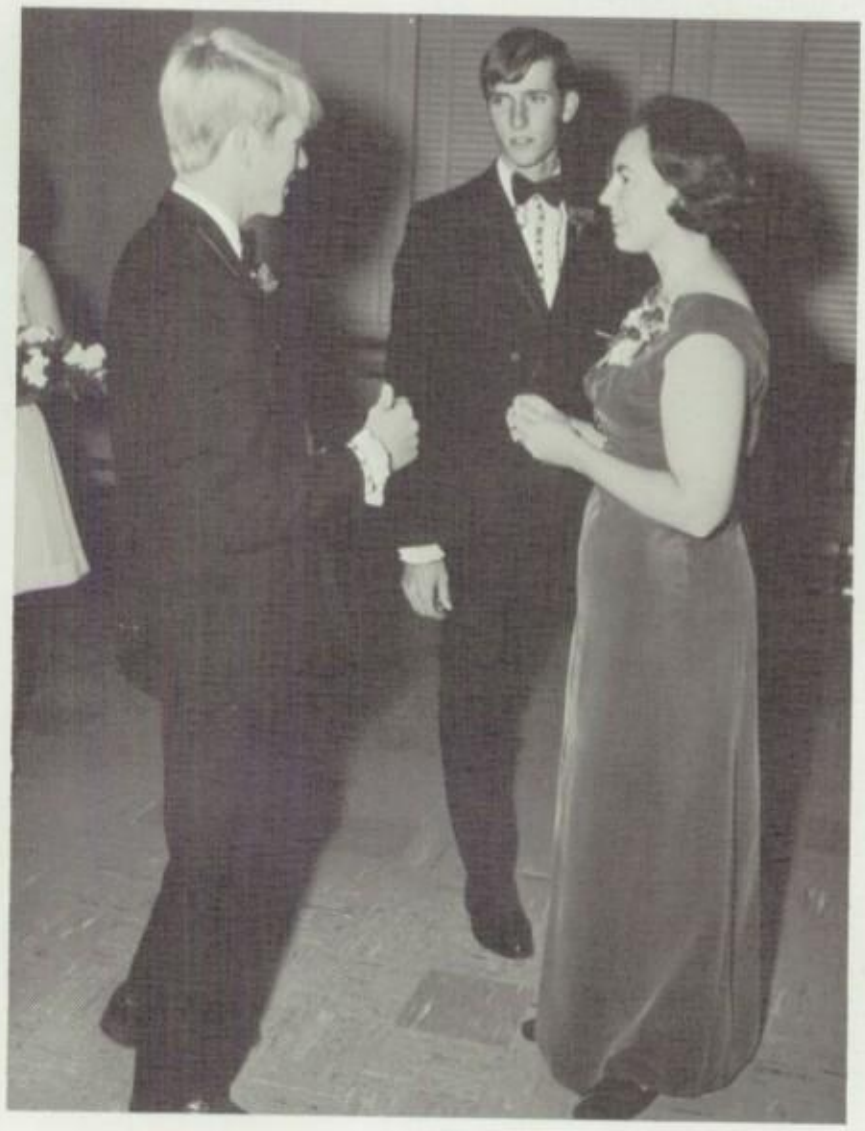
MISS ELLEN FIELDS

The seniors loved her, for she was there when no one else would come.

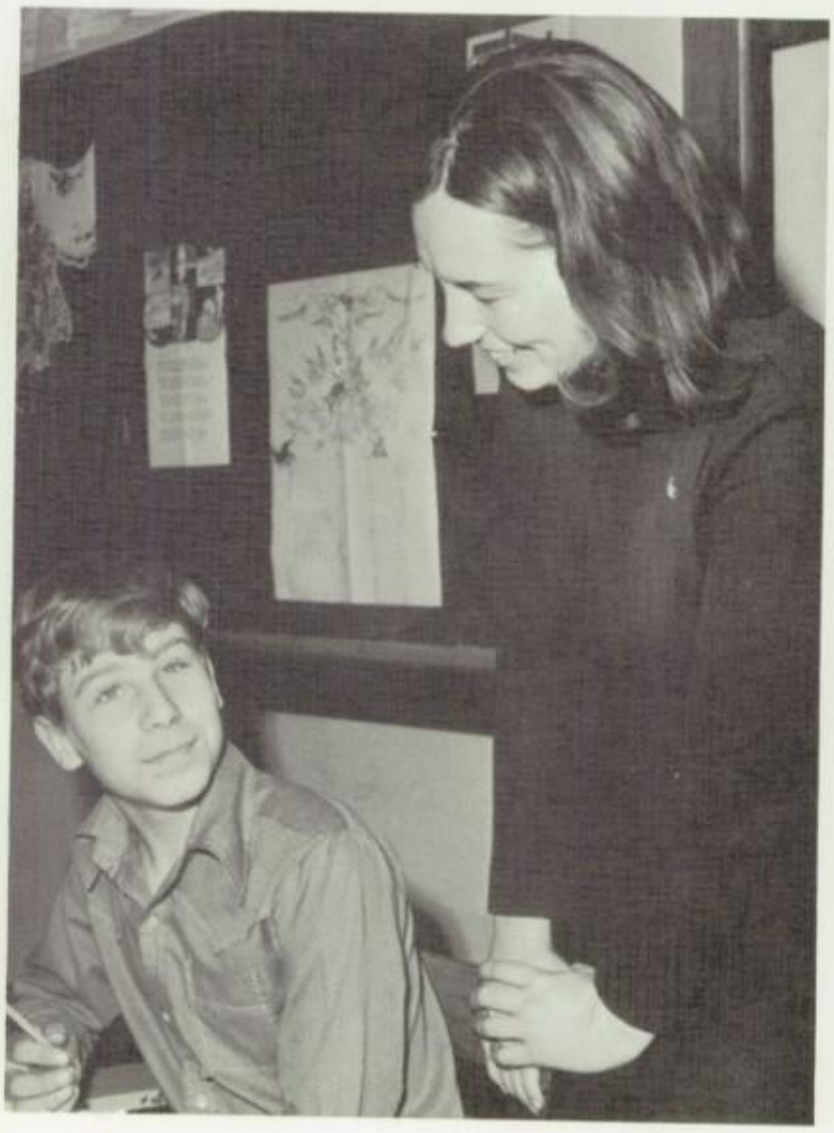
She accepts the reward she so richly deserves.

memorable years, she has grown and learned with them

Tired from one class, she gathers strength for the next.



Teaching has its awards; Miss Fields gets one of them.

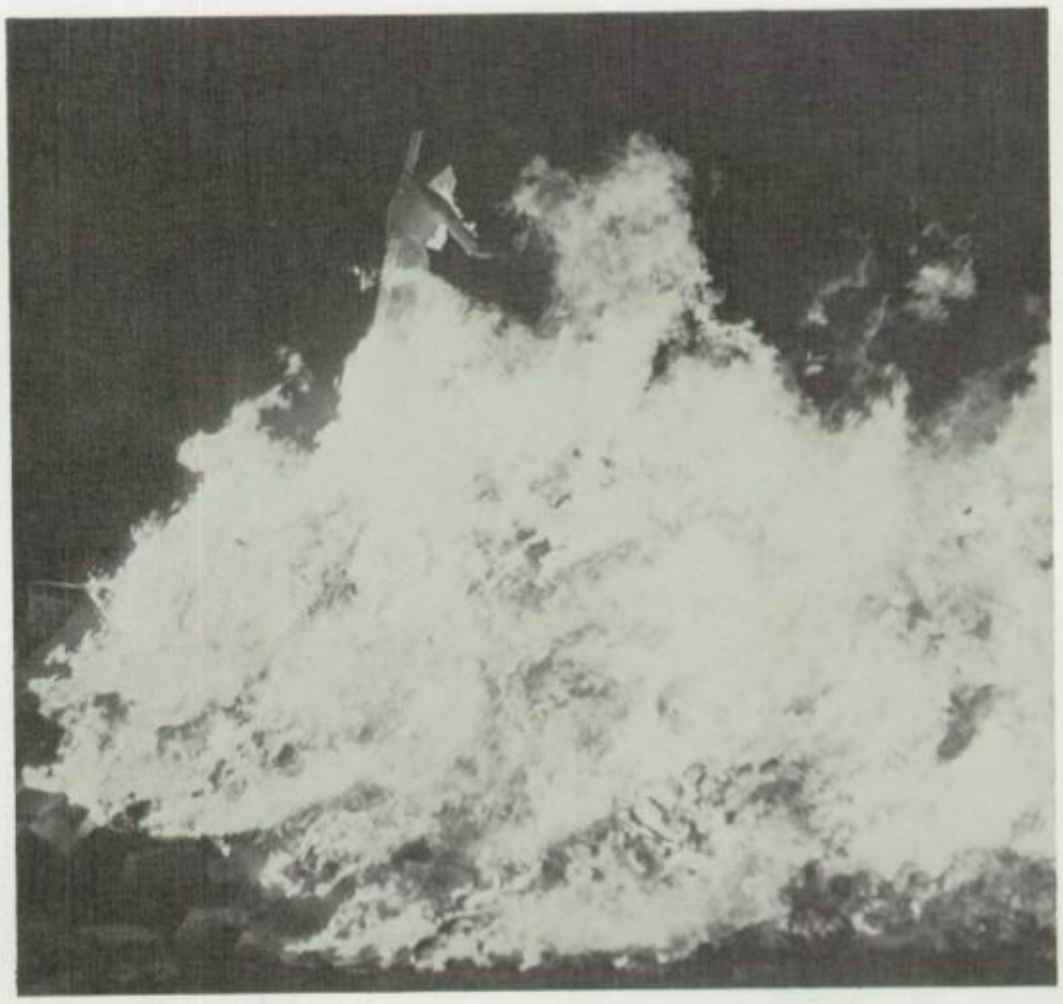


Events

Seniors romanticize and present:

"But, Miss Fields, the ballots clearly show you came in only second!!"

Despite a drizzly day and dampened spectators, the annual Homecoming parade proceeded through the puddles on a course down Knoxville's main street. When the parade had passed by, everyone eagerly awaited results of float judging. The Class of '72 put another name to their list of winning floats and second place honors were garnered by the sophomores while the Latin-French Club entry tacked down an honorable mention. Fingers and spirits were frozen at the Homecoming football game, a chilly Friday night. The weather was not the only thing that was cold, as the Blue Bullets could not seem to get warmed up and at the final gun found themselves on the short end of a 12-6 score. The Homecoming Dance on Saturday completed the weekend festivities with Don Johnson and Linda Knox reigning as king and queen. Long will students remember the romantic spirit of the Homecoming of 1970-71.



Hoping for a north wind, the annual bonfire was built near the school.

A TIME FOR US

Although the Junior Class wasn't entered, their float "Wherefore Art Thou Commandoes" won first prize.

Your first kiss will last forever.

"Now, son, do as I say, not as I do. Don't trip the little girl."

"Once Upon A time . . .", the Senior Class' float, managed to hold together long enough to receive second place.

Bullets' potential better than record indicates

Although this year's Varsity football team did not have an outstanding record, this was no indication of the ability of the team. After every game, win or lose, the Bullets' rivals knew that they had played a tough opponent. In only the Galva game did it appear that the Bullers were outclassed, but this delusion lasted for only one half as the Bullets held them to a -14 yards total offense in the second half. Breaks were far and few in between; nevertheless, the Bullets' offense began to move the ball consistently in the next game against Alexis. With a few breaks, more depth, and dry weather, the Bullets, captained by Don Johnson, John Cowan, and Jeff Putnam, might have been 8-1.

With the help of many laughs, a few sorrows, and several returning lettermen, the Junior Varsity football team proved to be good prospects as next year's varsity gridders. This year's edition was probably the best physically endowed team in recent years. Although their record of two wins, three losses, and two ties did not indicate greatness, there were several outstanding performances turned in by linemen David Musselman, Tom Grady, and Tom Thurman; quarterback Tim Myers, and halfback Greg Atwater, who also majored at the varsity level.

Hampered by costly injuries, the Baby Bullets won only one game while losing four this year. Head Coach John Rosene and his assistant James Patterson saw seventh grader Bob Knapp lead the team in rushing, receiving, and scoring. Paul Mathews was named captain of this year's team while Jim Pettifurd, Steve Hickerson, Bill Fleisher, and Rick Aplin were also cited for their play.

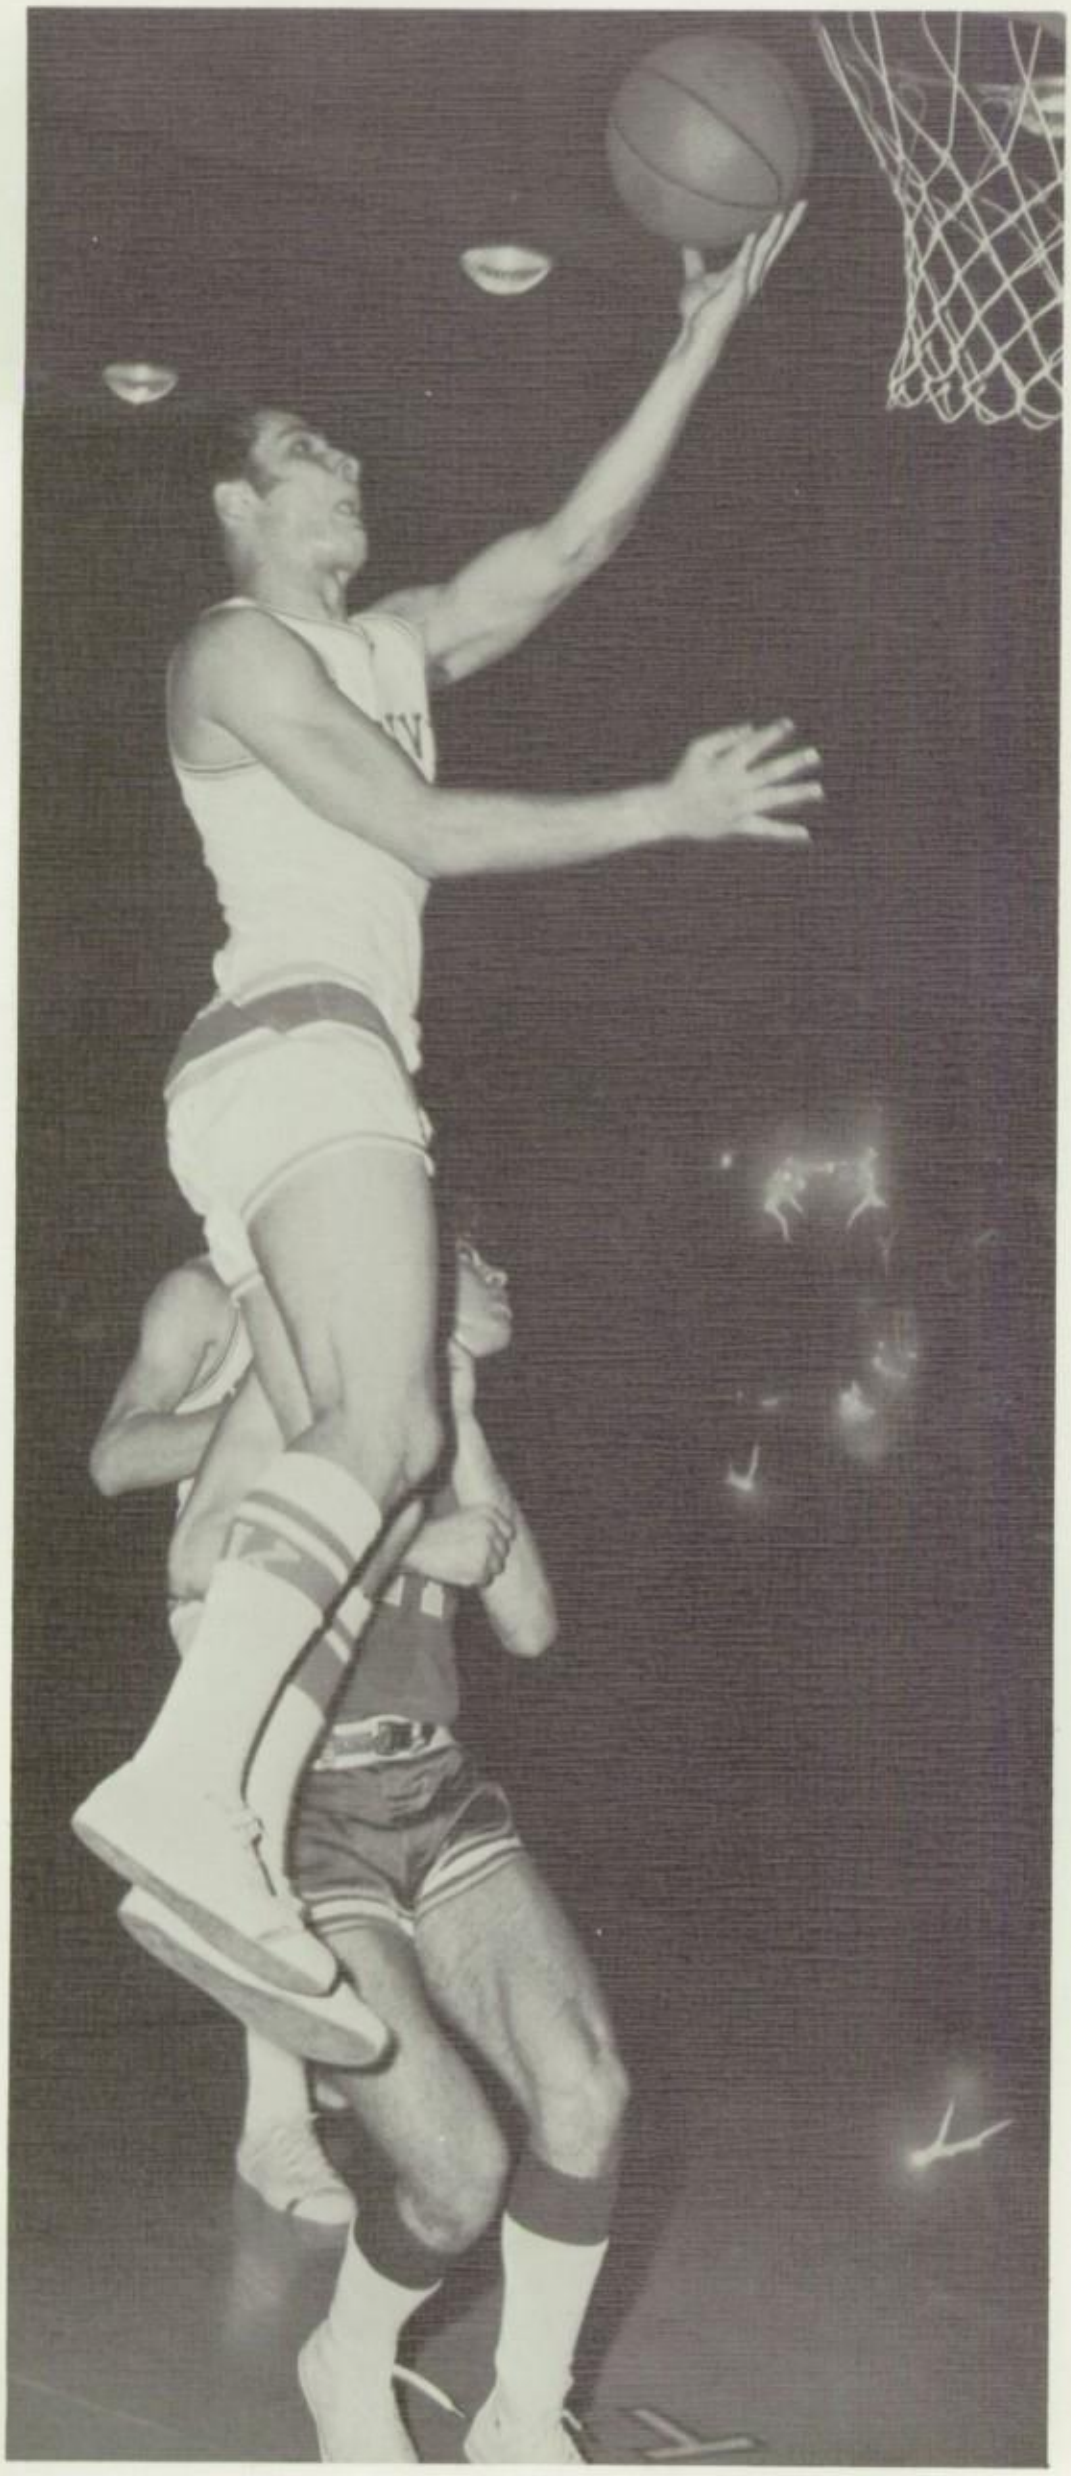
Bullets capture Little 6 for third consecutive time

Coach Hise is unhappy again, but his assistant Mr. Murdock is happy — the crowd is throwing money.

A Regional Tournament loss to the Macomb Bombers at Macomb ended an era in Knoxville basketball that produced pleasure for fans and memories for players that will last for years. In the last six years, teams on which this year's seniors composed a major part have had a combined record of 98-8. This record will be a standard by which all future teams that participate for Knoxville Junior-Senior High School will be measured. The awesome rebounding, scoring, and defense of Little All Staters Jeff Putnam and Wayne Mastin gave the Bullets an edge that few teams could overcome when the ability of Don Johnson, Kirk King, and John Cowman were added. The vaunted fast break that is a trademark of all Jerry Hise-coached teams took awhile to get unwound this year, but when it did, it was stopped only four times . . . all four times the Bullets were stopped without the break, but every game was close.



Highlights of this years' season were the capturing of the Knoxville Invitational Tournament, capturing the Little Six Conference title for the fifth time in the last seven years, and winning over twenty games for the third straight year. At the season's end, the team members elected Don Johnson captain, Jeff Putnam MVP, and Kirk King was recognized as free throw percentage award winner, while Wayne Mastin was presented the Knoxville Journal Varsity Scholastic Award. Although this particular team is now gone, it will never be forgotten.

JV's capture County show great promise

Led by the 22-point-per-game average of Tom Thurman, the rebounding of J. D. Putnam, and the steady play of Tim Myers, Greg Atwater, and Tim Clewell, the JV team won the Knox County Tourney. An impressive 16-4 record and a tie for second place in the conference represented a great improvement for the young cagers who should provide an excellent nucleus for future varsity teams.

Freshman cages in near miss; experience disappointment

After losing its first three games, the Freshman team won nine in a row. This included winning the Little Four Tourney at Abingdon by beating Costa in a double overtime 51-49 and then beating Abingdon on their home floor 40-36 in the championship game. The conference race went down to the final game at Abingdon with both teams taking 6-1 conference records into the game. Although having beaten Abingdon twice before, the team was plagued with poor shooting and lost 57-46. First year Coach Ron Zarn's team, led by Ron Nelson, Junior Marquith, and Jeff Jones, ended the season with a 9-5 record.

Bullets win County

The Bullets entered the year somewhat apprehensively. Before it was over, however, everyone knew that when a track meet was held, the Bullets would fly. Bill Beardsley, Bob White, Dave Becker, Jerry Scalf, and Kirk Sanford were consistent winners all year in their respective events. Seniors Leroy Scraceo and John Shea, sophomores Junior Carr, Tim Clewell, and Tim Myers, as well as juniors Jeff Glass, Kevin Kennelly, and George Cummings added depth and overall balance to the team. Seniors John Cowman, Mack Glass, and Bruce Johnson, along with junior Bill Boydston contributed to the various shuttle and relay teams which got key victories. Highlights of this year's team were the run-away victory of the annual County Track Meet, a strong showing at the tough Carthage Relays, and the 100-yard dash victory at the District Track Meet by MVP Bill Beardsley. Although no records were broken this year, the depth, balance, and versatility made the thinclads a very tough group.

Sophs show promise

The future looks bright for the spring sport at KHS. Underclassmen Tim Clewell, Danny Eiker, Tim Myers, Roger Williams, Pete Fergusson, and Junior Carr all earned varsity letters. Carr's efforts brought him the Tulin Long Jump Award and the JV shot put record. Freshmen Gregg Brittingham and Tony Smith performed very well at times for the Varsity. If these young men remain dedicated and push themselves, they may well be the nucleus for a Little Six Championship in two years.

This year's Junior High track team possessed enough potential to set new records in many different events. Pacing the Seventh Grade team were Rick Aplin, who broke the record in the high jump, and Bob Knapp, who now holds two new marks in the discus and long jump. Prospective JV standouts for next year include Snider, Pettifurd, Mathews, and Rice. Discipline and obedience were instruments which aided this year's track squad to become a success. Enforcing these qualities were head coach John Rosene and assistant coach Ron Zarn.

Unraveling the problems of the entire school district was the duty of the members of the Board of Education. Responding to ticklish situations posed by taxpayers, complaints expressed by the faculty, and the financial needs of the district, the board members forged ahead to carry out the progressive ideals of Community Unit District 202. Rows and stacks of knowledge were amassed in the KHS Library and were conveniently located for student use. The Library furnished a tranquil environment for scrutiny, research, or just "jumping into a good book." Mrs. German served as a mediator between the printed material and fascinated students, and she also maintained order so that the atmosphere of the room would remain unchanged. It was further established as a valuable outlet and service to industrious students.

English and Language Departments enhanced the learning experience through a variety of less restrictive programs. English courses offered both independent and guided study in areas of grammar, literature, and creative writing. The Foreign Language Department stressed vocabulary and transition, along with promoting a better understanding of the origin of the modern English Language.

Miss Metelka provides a rare smile as she sees a student leave by way of a study hall window.

Greater demands by interested students brought about an expansion in the vocational training program during the past year. Cooperating with the Galesburg Vocational Center, the administration at KHS arranged for students to attend classes at the center in the morning. In addition to studying for an occupation, many students had the opportunity to "earn and learn" trough the cooperative work training program. Certainly these new courses offered a broader spectrum in the total educational picture.

Mr. McKillip phones in an order to the teacher replacement bureau.

Advice and counseling were readily available for those seniors who planned to become college students. Individualized assistance was provided by the counselors by revealing some of the obscure facets of college preparation and life. The counselors offered assistance in such areas as college entrance exams, financial aid, expenses, and application procedures. Truly, the work of the guidance counselors is exemplified in the percentage of seniors who furthered their educations in 1971-72.

Mrs. Lundquist warns the photographer to make a quick exit before he is attacked by the entire cheerleading squad.

Cooks, bus drivers, and custodians work together;

Cooks: Mary Daugherty, Virginia McLaren, Audrey Hughbanks, Louise Chism, Mildred Hammerlund.

KHS cooks pooled all of their culinary knowledge to create nourishing meals that provided students with enough "food for thought" to get them through afternoon classes. Janitors did all of the "dirty work" of cleaning the halls so that a pleasant learning atmosphere was maintained. Transportation was provided by a group of efficient bus drivers. These men were able to control their patience when parents would have been on the verge of insanity.

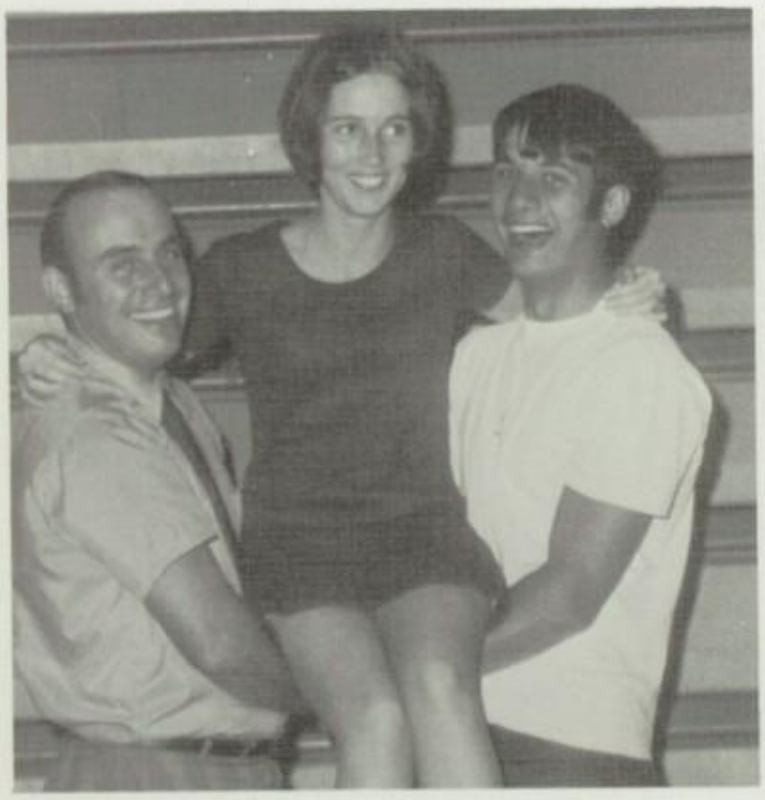
KHS newspaper named NO-NAME no more . . .



Holding together this year's fine school newspaper are Co-Editors Jeff Putnam and Jackie Whiteside and Advisor Mr. Murdock.

The dawn of the "70's" saw the arrival of the Blue Bulletin at KHS. With it came a somewhat different approach to reporting school activities. Its circulation provided students with controversial reading material in the form of news articles and editorials. Artistical and photographic endeavors also complemented the written material and gave the paper new depth through visual understanding. As a result, the Blue Bulletin truly became an expression of the student body.

As Pam Henderson looks up the word "obscenie," Mr. Murdock and Debbie Cook seem to be having a verbal controversy.

High School Band exhibits the traditional

A symphony of success was composed by the KHS Band during 1970-71. From the whine of the trumpets in a parade to the soft squeal of the clarinets in an overture, one could listen to the sounds and tell that it was more than a group of notes — it was music. The marching band strutted out in several parades and became associated with marching excellence. Perfection was also exhibited in several magnificent halftime shows. With the coming of winter, band members began concentrating on preparing for the concert season. A spring concert and participation in the state music contest highlighted months of labor on individual parts as well as the music of the band. Also with the arrival of winter came the "soul sound" of the pep band. Truly the efforts of the band during the past year epitomized the Spirit of '71.

Knoxville High School Orchestra members found little time for "fiddling around" this year. Public appearances included a well-received appearance at Mable Woolsey Grade School, the Christmas concert, and a Spring concert. Chamber groups were active in community entertainment and the State Music Contest, rewarded by a trip to Chicago. French Clubs produce a prosperous year

The Gauls and Romans were certainly not at war this year, as there was a close cooperation between both French and Latin Clubs. An award-winning float, a successful sales drive, and an enjoyable stunt night were results of the unity between the two clubs. Each club also had individual activities. Among these were the Latin Club's annual banquet which featured Roman attire and quisine fit for Caesar himself. Frenchmen also showed their lust for food at a pizza party held during the winter. They journeyed to Normal, Illinois, in December to see the French play, "The Imaginary Invalid," and also went on another field trip in the spring.

Tackling the problem of pollution was the main interest of this year's Future Homemakers of America. Many posters and bulletin boards were seen throughout the school, so that all would become aware. Setting the fashion pace for the Junior High was the job of the Junior High Girls Club. The club was divided into two councils, the seventh and eighth grades. Judgement was made by members of the two councils on such matters as questionable fashions trends, hairstyles, and etiquette.

The idea of proper social appearance and behavior was emphasized as the creed of the club, and with this concept in mind, girls left the Junior High more capable of coping with the many problems of a high school atmosphere.

Student Councils work with the administration

Cooperation with the school administration, the Senior High Student Council initiated several new policies. Among the new policies established was the creation of a more flexible dress code. The flaming torch and keystone, symbols of the National Honor Society, were once again glorified when 1970-71 found several well-rounded students inducted into the organization. Senior members powered the society to uphold its high principles of character, scholarship, leadership, and service. New members were inducted in March at the traditional all-school assembly. Vigorous work by the old members enabled an enjoyable banquet to become reality.

Again this year Mrs. German and her Library Club kept the Library running smoothly and efficiently. A skillful group of cadets handled the normal time-consuming tasks, freeing Mrs. German for more important duties such as ordering books and doctoring her wart. The club took a trip to Herbert Hoover Memorial Library, where much was learned about the workings of a large library.

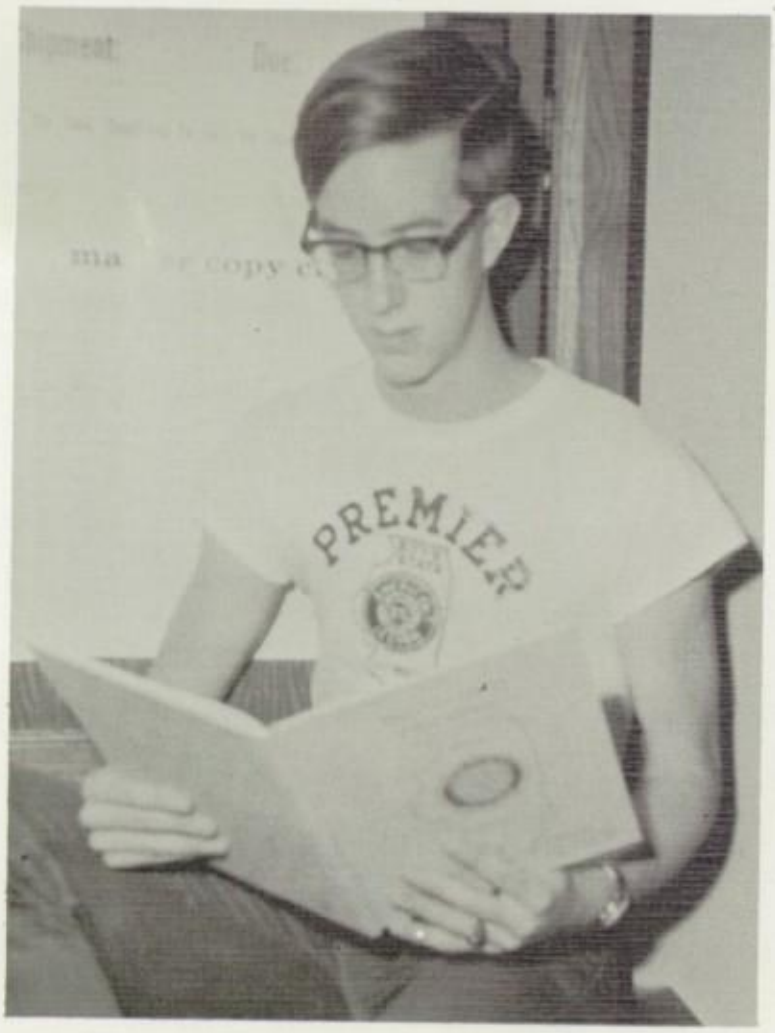
A portrait of America's youth unveiled by Staters



Jim Dowell reviews the parade drills that he took part in at Boys State.

Genuine feelings of patriotism and citizenship are often overshadowed by campus unrest and civil disobedience among America's youth. However, the brighter and more encouraging portrait of youth is unveiled through Premier Boys State. Fellowship, leadership, and an understanding of government are stressed at the state camp which implants within its participants a feeling of pride in our democratic country. Boys State provided a rewarding experience — an experience to be shared with others, and which could even change youth's pessimistic and critical outlook upon our government.

"See . . . the . . . bunk bed . . . The bunk bed belongs to Wayne," concentrates Wayne Mastin as he reads from his Boys State Yearbook.

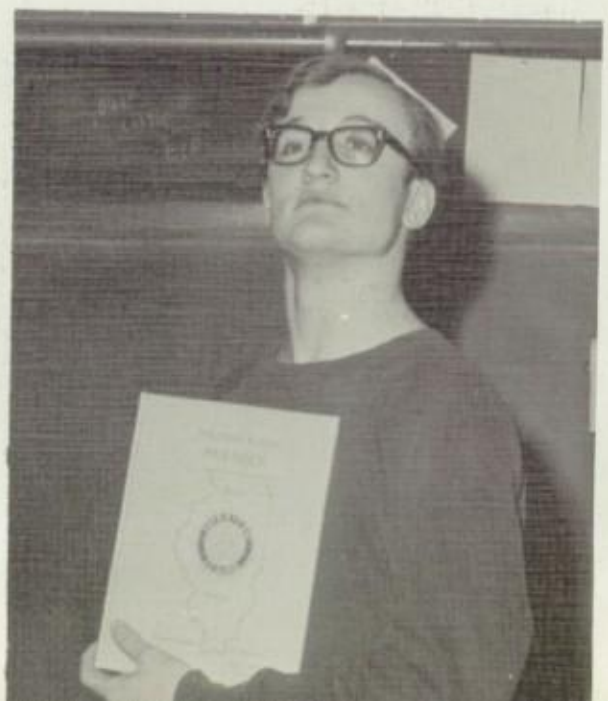
Don Johnson remarks, "By the end of the week even those nurses looked good!"

Stephen Baker poses out of uniform after attending Boys State.

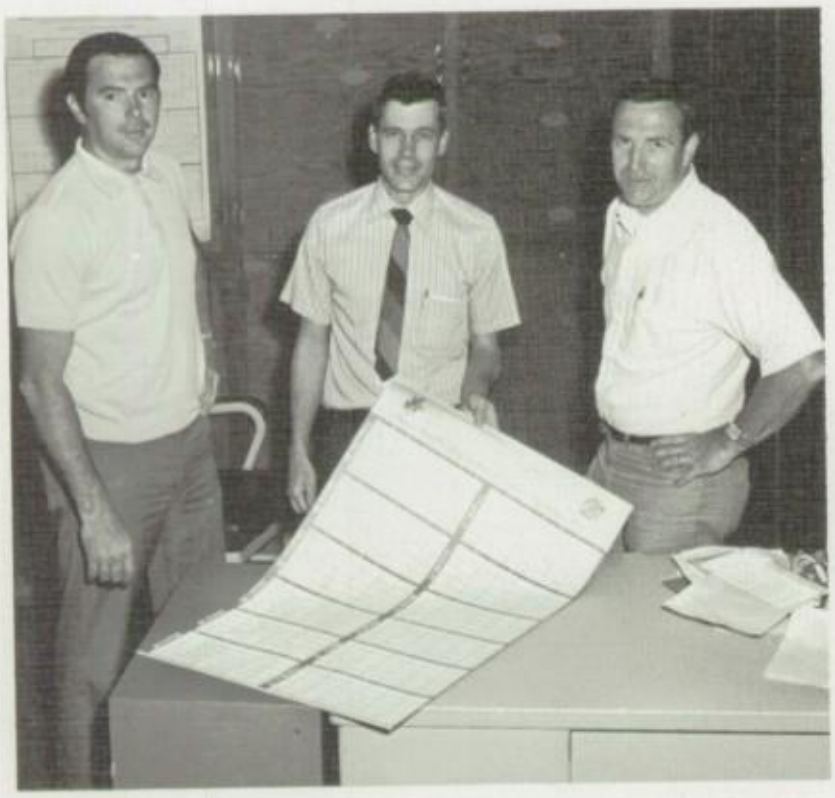
"To be or not to be; that is the question," was the statement that David Becker released to our press.



Seniors Kirk Sanford, Robert Deppe, Wayne Mastin, Mack Glass, and Dave Becker play round-table ping pong while waiting for fellow seniors to arrive.

K Club builds treasury through various activities

Led by President Kirk Sanford, Vice President Don Johnson, Secretary Bob White, Treasurer John Cowman, and Statistician Leroy Schraceo, the K Club sought to increase the supply of money in the treasury in order that new jackets may be bought for future members. To accomplish this, the club held scrap drives, car washes, collected tickets, and sold school cushions. Although no benefits were derived by the members as a group, the satisfaction received by each member for his work was large.



Three of the K Club advisors, Mr. Hise, Mr. Daugherty, and Mr. Kniss, check the calendar for any up-coming athletic events.

"Cheer up, John, at least you didn't have to know valance today."

Junior K Club members, Kevin Kennelly, Bill Mathers, George Cummings, Don Gardner, Kirk King, and Rich Fleisher, ask the musical question, "I wonder what that round thing is for?"

Treasurer John Cowman presents the latest expenditure to Mr. Kniss.

Sophomores Greg Atwater, Tom Thurman, Tim Myers, Dave Musselman, Tim Clewell, and Tom Grady find the fact that fellow member Roger Williams does not have a jacket somewhat humorous.

Mr. Daugherty smirks as he finds the average IQ of K Club members is 10 points below that of a gorilla.

Seventh Graders sell bows to help mentally retarded

Destined to serve their sentences of two years in junior high, Seventh Graders must have fearfully entered the halls of KHS. The transition, however, instilled exuberance within the class members, for they participated actively in bake sales, concessions, and work days. Through the sale of Christmas bows a tremendous social effort was achieved when the class raised money for the mentally retarded.

Having earned enough money from the previous year, the Eighth Graders were able to sit back and enjoy the comforts of their final year of freedom. The primary activity of the class was a "big bash" which was held in honor of the Seventh Graders in the spring. Their fates were finally determined when graduation exercises were held in May to promote those who had successfully completed the two "orientation" years.

"Freshies" up treasury with proceeds from bake sale

The agony of being accepted into "the ranks" of the Senior High faced the Class of '74 this year. They accomplished the mammoth task with ease, however, and aided greatly in governing the corridors of KHS. Concessions at Junior Varsity football games and freshman basketball games composed a large part of the "freshie's" financial efforts. Their piggy bank bulged even more with the completion of a successful bake sale. Freshmen learned at least one important lesson in their first year of high school — how to survive.

Having successfully survived their freshman year, the Class of '73 at the onset of their sophomore year rallied around knowledgeable and resourceful class officers to solve the problem at hand — money. Utilizing the ability of capable individuals, a coordinated effort yielded a profitable chili supper. The class of '73's bank balance was supplemented by a workday and concessions. They attained maturity when they successfully coped with the problem of erecting a lasting memorial to Suzanne Hickey. Overall, the class had a very outstanding year, and further progress is expected from them in their (hopefully) two remaining years at KHS.

In 1970-71, juniors faced the indignation of paying homage to a tremendous Senior Class by preparing for a memorable prom. The Homecoming float of the juniors won first place, and many class members displayed interest by working overtime to complete the float and also by "serving time" in the office after Homecoming. Some of the class activities included a chicken noodle dinner, candy sales, smorgasbord, Little Six Dance, and a comical class play. An all-night prom was the final reward for months of planning, preparation, and raising funds. Seniors arrived at Prom, assured that their junior cohorts had organized a pleasurable evening.

Class of '71 leaves KHS

The Class of '71 left with KHS many reminders of its active existence. But before the '71'ers had left, it too had collected many remnants of its senior year—the queen's crown from Homecoming, a gray wig from the class play, sore muscles from fun night, blisters from the skating party, a corsage and last dance from Junior-Senior Prom, a sense of togetherness from Class Day, and finally a diploma. It seemed like so little, yet it was so much.

"The Nose" knows how to have a party.

"What a strange day this was."

"The red wire to the blue wire or was it the red wire to the black wire. . .?"

Baccalaureate, Senior Day, and Commencement

The final week of their high school careers came to an end all too quickly for the seniors. Baccalaureate initiated the week of activities terminating in graduation. Cold, cloudy skies did not dampen the spirits of the seniors on Skip Day held at Lake Landuit. However, beautiful weather honored the Class of '71 at their graduation—a final tribute for twelve years of hard work.

The Spirit of '71 . . .

It took a lot of people besides the regular staff members to make this book, and we, as the staff, gratefully accepted their aid. When there was a great need for final layouts, Junior Carr, Pete Fergusson, and J. D. Putnam kindly stepped in and spent many hours of their free time toward completion of this book. And as the year before, Dean Mastin faithfully dug up the lost Jr. High sports records. Marti Mumey and Larry Kendrick also helped when the time of deadline was descending on us faster than the work could be done. Gale Shepherd helped us greatly by selling Jesters and running many errands. Also, although Miss Payne and I spent most of the year telling them they were pests, we would like to thank the early birds in Miss Payne's Fifth Hour Class for occasionally lending a helping hand.

The year is now over, and I and the staff will each go our separate ways. Yet, we can not be sad at parting, for each will leave with his own special memories and the feeling of a job well done. At sometime or other they will each ponder the question asked me all year, "Would you do it again?" and immediately say "No!" thinking of all the work to be done, but don't let them fool you, because deep down they will remember, as I will, that the work wasn't that bad and the memories are well worth it.

As this year holds great memories for us, we hope we have recorded great memories for you, too, and that as you thumb through the pages, you, too, will feel the spirit of '71.
